MT YOUTH IN TRANSITION CONFERENCE

What to Expect...

In the spirit of discovery, the annual Montana Youth Transitions (MYT) Conference will seek to answer important questions about the challenging journey into adulthood for Montana's youth with disabilities. It will be an opportunity for students, parents, teachers, vocational rehabilitation counselors, case managers and others to network, explore resources, and discover pathways to meaningful futures!

During the conference, there will be a Real Life Fair with vendors representing education, independent living, recreation, employment, and other supportive services.

Presenters will include well known keynotes as well as Montanans who have themselves gone through the transition process and can offer insight, guidance and support.

A youth track will also be provided to start youth on their own individualized transition journey.

MYT 2012

"I liked meeting other kids. I learned about how to stand up and keep trying. I learned about job options."

~ Rahkei, student

KEYNOTE PRESENTERS

Josie Badger recently finished her year as Ms. Wheelchair America 2012. In April 2011 she completed her coursework and comprehensive examination for her PhD in Healthcare Ethics at Duquesne University and is currently starting her dissertation. She graduated school for rehabilitation counseling at the University of Pittsburgh in April 2009. In May of 2007, she graduated Summa Cum Laude from Geneva College, majoring in Disability Law and Advocacy.

Josie has served as president and vice president of the National Youth Leadership Network. On the state level, Josie is also a founding member, and ex-president of the Pennsylvania Youth Leadership Network. She also works with Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh on the family forum. Josie was named Glamour Magazine's 11th "Top College Women of 2006." Josie works at the Parent Education & Advocacy Leadership (PEAL) Center as Youth Coordinator for the State Implementation Grant, assisting families in healthcare transition.

Josie is an expert on Self-Advocacy, and presents from a first hand experience on tips to be successful as a person with a disability. Josie is a strong advocate and leader and teaches as well as lives an effective independent living philosophy. Successful transition outcomes for young people with disabilities is her passion.

As a young boy, Nelson Lauver fell through the cracks of an educational system that was ill-prepared to deal with a student who couldn't learn like the rest. Socially promoted (just passed through), he actually graduated from high school and received a diploma he struggled to read. He knew he was different...he just didn't know why.

After nearly a dozen more years struggling as a functionally illiterate young adult, an amazing chance encounter and the utterance of one word – dyslexia – changed Nelson's life and set him on a journey that few would have imagined.

Today Nelson is an acclaimed author, broadcast journalist, speaker, humorist, and human rights advocate. He is known to radio listeners across the country for "The American Storyteller Radio Journal," a daily 4-minute slice of the American experience.

Nelson's newly released, award winning memoir, Most UnLikely to Succeed, is an inspirational story of hope and determination against seeming insurmountable odds.

Dr. Ed O'Leary has spent over 40 years working in and with schools as a secondary special education teacher, special education consultant, transition specialist, work experience coordinator, program specialist, and program director. He has also taught at the graduate and undergraduate level and has worked in Vocational Rehabilitation. He has trained and presented nationally on the transition requirements under IDEA 97 and IDEA 2004 and has developed an approach in helping districts and states meet the transition requirements and demonstrate improvement and results. The Transition Outcome Projects has or is operating in 27 states/territories and over 1,500 districts. States/districts that have been implementing the Transition Outcomes Project (TOPs) have demonstrated, through trend data, improvements in meeting many of the transition requirements.

Dr. O'Leary works one-half time for the Technical Assistance for Excellence in Special Education (TAESE) program at Utah State University. TAESE is a division of the Center for Persons with Disabilities at Utah State University. TAESE provides a variety of services such as event planning, training, and education-focused consultation. TAESE is the organization that administers the Mountain Plains Regional Resource Center, the TASK12 education interpreter training and certification program, the national Dispute Resolution Consortium, and a variety of other State and federal contracts and technical assistance agreements. The mission of TAESE is to help State agencies, schools, early intervention providers, and families improve outcomes for infants, toddlers, children and youth with disabilities

During his other one-half time he operates his own consulting firm, Educational Consulting, Inc. In that capacity he provides training and technical assistance, as well as speaking on secondary special education and transition service issues to educators, adult agencies and parents, nationally.
